More than 70 women have accused Harvey Weinstein of sexual misconduct. He's expected to turn himself in to police on Friday. GETTY IMAGES

Movie producer Weinstein to surrender on sex assault charges

I Film producer Harvey Weinstein was expected to surrender to authorities in New York on Friday, months after he was toppled from Hollywood's most powerful ranks by scores of women accusing him of sexual assault, a person familiar with the case said.

Weinstein's spokesman Juda Engelmayer and Weinstein's lawyer Benjamin Brafman both declined to comment. The imminent criminal charging of Weinstein, which was first reported by the New York Daily News, follows a months-long investigation, including by the Manhattan district attorney's office. A person familiar with the case confirmed the report to Reuters on condition of anonymity. The New York Times and other news outlets also reported Weinstein was expected to surrender.

More than 70 women have accused the co-founder of the Miramax studio and The Weinstein Co. of sexual misconduct spanning decades, including rape. The allegations, first reported by the New York Times and the New Yorker last year, gave rise to the #MeToo movement in which hundreds of women have publicly accused powerful men in business, government and entertainment.

Weinstein has denied having nonconsensual sex with anyone.

Weinstein will be charged over an allegation by at least one accuser, Lucia Evans, a former aspiring actress who told the New Yorker that Weinstein forced her to give him oral sex in 2004, the Times and Daily News reported. The exact nature of the charges being brought by Manhattan prosecutors was unclear on Thursday afternoon.

The New York Police Department and the district attorney's office declined to comment on the case.

Entertainment industry heavyweights have distanced themselves from Weinstein, once one of Hollywood's most powerful men, since the accusations became public. The board of the Weinstein Co. fired him and the company itself filed for bankruptcy in March. In 2017, he was expelled from the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, which presents the Oscars.

A former fixture in the most elite entertainment circles of Manhattan and Los Angeles, Weinstein has since been seen spending time in Scottsdale, Arizona, where The New York Times said he had been seeking treatment for sex addiction.

London's Metropolitan Police have said they are also investigating an allegation of sexual assault against Weinstein, while prosecutors in Los Angeles said in February they were reviewing three accusations of sexual assault against him.

Brafman said in a May court filing that federal prosecutors in New York had opened a separate criminal investigation into the allegations.

Actress Ashley Judd last month sued Weinstein, saying that he cost her a part in 1998 for the film "The Lord of the Rings" after she rejected his sexual advances, charges that Weinstein has denied.

Brafman, Weinstein's lawyer, is known for representing high-profile criminal defendants, including pop star Michael Jackson and Martin Shkreli, the former drug company executive.

In 2011, Brafman represented Dominique Strauss-Kahn, the former head of the International Monetary Fund, over charges, which were eventually dropped, that he sexually assaulted a New York City hotel maid.

ACTOR MORGAN FREEMAN ACCUSED OF HARASSMENT

2 At least eight women have accused actor Morgan Freeman of inappropriate behavior or harassment while working with them on film sets or at promotional events, CNN reported on Thursday. CNN said it spoke with 16 people as part of its investigation into the 80-year-old actor, some of whom also alleged inappropriate behavior by Freeman at his production company, Revelations Entertainment. In a statement, Freeman said he was sorry to anyone who had been made to feel uncomfortable or disrespected. "Anyone who knows me or has worked with me knows I am not someone who would intentionally offend or knowingly make anyone feel uneasy," the statement said. "I apologize to anyone who felt uncomfortable or disrespected — that was never my intent." Representatives for Freeman and Revelations Entertainment did not respond to requests for further comment. Reuters was unable to independently confirm any of the allegations.

TRUMP PARDONS BOXING CHAMP JACK JOHNSON

3 President Donald Trump on Thursday issued a posthumous pardon to boxer Jack Johnson, the first African-American heavyweight champion, who was jailed a century ago due to his relationship with a white woman. "I believe Jack Johnson is a worthy person to receive a pardon, to correct a wrong in our history," Trump said. In a case that came to symbolize racial injustice, Johnson was arrested in 1912 with Lucille Cameron, who later became his wife, for violating the Mann Act. The law was passed two years earlier and made it a crime to take a woman across state lines for immoral purposes. Johnson died in 1946. In signing the pardon, the president cited "tremendous racial tension" during the time Johnson was champion. "He really represented something that was both very beautiful and very terrible at the same time," Trump said. Actor Sylvester Stallone, famous as the star of the "Rocky" boxing-movie franchise, and former world heavyweight boxing champion Lennox Lewis flanked Trump for the pardon in the Oval Office.

NEWS

The president pointed to “tremendous anger and open hostility” displayed by the rogue nation’s leader, Kim Jong Un.

President Donald Trump on Thursday canceled the historical meeting with North Korean leader Kim Jong Un that was expected to take place in Singapore on June 12.

Trump released a letter saying, “Based on the tremendous anger and open hostility displayed in your most recent statement, I feel it is inappropriate, at this time, to have this long-planned meeting. ... Therefore, please let this letter serve to represent that the Singapore summit, for the good of both parties, but to the detriment of the world, will not take place.”

Julian G. Ku, director of international programs at Maurice A. Deane school of law at Hofstra University, gave Metro his insight on the decision, which ended months of diplomatic advances between the two countries.

Here’s what you should know:

Why did Trump

cancel the meeting with Kim Jong Un? It is hard to say for sure why the meeting was canceled by President Trump. It may simply be a negotiating tactic to make the North Korean government demonstrate its willingness to discuss denuclearization. Or it may simply be because the president feels the North Koreans misled him on the level of seriousness they have toward the talks, and he now realizes the talks would not have accomplished anything.

Who wins and who loses after this decision was announced? I think there are no clear winners or losers. President Trump will lose out the possibility of a diplomatic achievement before the 2018 elections, so he faces the most immediate short-term cost. But Kim Jong Un will lose out on the opportunity to win global public recognition of his status as a world leader and to reduce economic pressure on his country. In the long term, I think this will be a bad outcome for North Korea more than for the United States.

Could another summit of this kind be achieved? A new meeting would almost certainly require a better understanding of what each side is willing to discuss and negotiate during such talks. I think an initial meeting of the two countries’ foreign ministers or other diplomats would probably be a better way to proceed rather than start with such a high-level meeting. In other words, the secretary of state could speak with his counterpart and lay out a specific set of topics that both sides are willing to discuss.

What role would South Korea and China play in such situation? Both countries are crucially important to making a summit successful. South Korea’s support for a meeting is necessary for any successful outcome since it is the country most affected by any decisions there. South Korea has been the primary driver of these peace talks and it has a strong incentive to continue to support talks.

China’s support of North Korea is also crucial in pressuring it to enter into negotiations, but also in supporting it when it faces isolation and pressure from the U.S. China’s reaction to the cancellation of the meeting may be crucial to whether North Korea relents and returns to the talks.

Threats and pressure have been part of President Trump’s negotiation strategy. Is it somewhat similar to what Kim Jong Un does? Could it be the reason that summit was called off? In many ways, President Trump’s colorful language is quite similar to the language used by the North Korean regime in previous years. So both sides are now using inflammatory rhetoric to set out their positions. The problem with this approach is that it is easy for each side to insult the other and undermine their relationship through public comments. This may explain why the meeting was ultimately canceled.

Pentagon: No change in US military posture after North Korea talks canceled

The U.S. military said Thursday it had not increased the already-high-level of vigilance or changed its posture on North Korea after President Donald Trump called off a historic summit with North Korean leader Kim Jong Un.

“There is a high state of vigilance — the state of vigilance that we always have because they have proven to be unpredictable in the past,” Lt. Gen.

“I hope we quickly are able to get back to that place, but ultimately, Chairman Kim will have that decision to make for himself.”

Mike Pompeo

Kenneth McKenzie, joint staff director, said at a Pentagon briefing referring to North Korea.

“But it is not a heightened state of vigilance. It is the normal state of vigilance that we maintain.”

talks on dismantling Pyongyang’s nuclear program but the decision was ultimately up to North Korean leader Kim Jong Un.

“I hope we quickly

are able to get back to that place, but ultimately Chairman Kim will have that decision to make for himself,” Pompeo told a Senate committee in his first comments shortly after Trump canceled a historic summit with Kim that had been scheduled for June 12 in Singapore.

For many New Yorkers, Memorial Day weekend will start Friday with shortened work days or, if you're lucky enough, no work at all. Like most holiday weekends, the MTA will offer extra getaway trains Friday to help you get an early start to the long weekend.

Subways and Buses

On Memorial Day Monday, buses and subways will run on a Sunday schedule.

LIRR The Long Island Rail Road will have nine extra afternoon trains leaving Penn Station between 1:42 p.m. and 3:48 p.m. Babylon branch • 2:22 p.m. and 3:31 p.m. trains will go express to Rockville Centre, then make local stops to Babylon • 2:32 p.m. will run express to Lynbrook, then make local stops to Babylon • 3 p.m. will stop at Jamaica and Rockville Centre then run local to Babylon Far Rockaway branch • 3:48 p.m. will run express to Locust Manor then make local stops to Far Rockaway Montauk branch • 2:56 p.m. change at Jamaica for an express to Westhampton, then make local stops to Montauk Port Jefferson branch • 2:08 p.m. stops at Jamaica, Mineola, then make local stops to Huntington • 2:26 p.m. stops at Forest Hills, Kew Gardens, Jamaica, New Hyde Park, then makes local stops to Huntington • 3:25 stops at Jamaica, Mineola, Westbury and Hicksville

On Saturday, Sunday and Memorial Day, the LIRR will run on a holiday schedule.

Metro-North Metro-North will have 17 additional afternoon trains departing Grand Central between 12:58 p.m. and 4:11 p.m. Some trains between 5:18 p.m. and 7:28 p.m. will be canceled and combined because of reduced ridership during that period.

Staten Island Railway As part of the SIR's Early Departure Get Away schedule, extra trains will run starting at 2:30 p.m. from St. George Ferry Terminal, with one express train and one local train awaiting every boat until 7:50 p.m.

Bridges and Tunnels Tube closures that are part of the Hurricane Sandy restoration work will take place at the Queens Midtown Tunnel and Hugh L. Carey Tunnel overnight Friday into Saturday morning, but will then be suspended until Tuesday night.

"One of the things that has been wonderful is our workers don't leave — we have a 90 percent retention rate once they've been hired away," said Workforce Opportunity Services' founder Dr. Arthur Langer. PROVIDED

City-based nonprofit tackles veteran, underserved unemployment

Workforce Opportunity Services develops and trains untapped talent for companies looking to diversify in 40 global cities.

The percentage of unemployed veterans hit an average all-time low of 4.5 percent last year, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, but that certainly wasn't always the case, which is why Bronx native Dr. Arthur Langer set out to create a systemic change when he founded Workforce Opportunity Service in 2005. "There is a diversity and inclusion problem in the current climate," Langer said, "It's difficult for companies to find workers in this category, and we're going to have an unemployment problem if we don't deal with this shortfall."

City-based Workforce Opportunity Services develops untapped talent from the veteran and underserved communities and places them with companies looking to diversify. WOS operates in 40 cities in the U.S., France and the Netherlands and has placed more than 3,800 workers at 60-plus companies worldwide.

"To us, veterans are an older version of the high school and college people that we try to help," said Langer, who is also a professor of professional practice at Columbia University. "There are lots of companies that were looking for veterans to help them and also realized they come with a little bit more experience because every veteran that comes out of the military has been educated and trained in a particular skill."

Langer has found many companies can be "risk-averse" and may have difficulty assim-ilating talent from these communities, so WOS offers what he says is a "risk-free environment as we're the employer to begin," he explained. "That's a huge differential than any other people doing this work."

WOS works with individuals to develop various skills for industries like IT, accounting and mechanics and also workshops business writing, workplace professionalism, time management, social media etiquette, interview skills and more. It even goes well beyond training and job placement, having paid for babysitters and rent so participants can attend night school or get on their feet, something that hasn't been for naught.

"One of the things that has been wonderful is our workers don't leave — we have a 90 percent retention rate once they've been hired away," Langer said.

Treatment offers new hope for erectile dysfunction

If you're at war with erectile dysfunction (ED), you're not alone. In fact, one in every four new patients is under the age of 40, according to the Journal of Sexual Medicine. While it may be comforting to know that it's more common than you think, you're probably more concerned with getting it under control. And we don't blame you—ED takes a serious toll on relationships, intimacy and overall well-being.

Enter ErectionWave, an innovative new approach that flips traditional ED treatment on its head. More often than not, the go-to answer is a lifetime Viagra prescription. The big downside here is that this really only treats the symptom, not the underlying problem. It also leaves you completely dependent on medication to enjoy a satisfying sex life.

Founded by a renowned Board Certified Urologist Dr. David Shusterman, ErectionWave is different in that it improves sex without medication. As the name implies, it directs high-frequency waves toward blood vessels that are normally narrow or blocked. This, in turn, optimizes blood flow, allowing for naturally strong erections. This holistic treatment also increases the size of penile veins and increases nerve function.

Translation: it's a noninvasive treatment option that actually gets to the root of erectile dysfunction.

Dr. Shusterman and his team of experienced sex function specialists are dedicated to eliminating the need for penile pumps, injections, and drugs like Viagra. They also offer highly effective alternative treatments that go beyond ErectionWave therapy. One pathway is hormone replacement—an umbrella term that covers a wide array of robust therapy options that are completely tailored to each individual patient. Addressing any hormonal causes of ED is critical to improving sexual desire and, ultimately, getting on the other side of erectile dysfunction.

Another successful option for men with ED is something known as the Priapus shot, aptly named after the Greek god of virility. The P-shot, as it's called, is a non-surgical, completely pain-free penis injection that serves double duty: improving sexual performance and increasing penis size by up to 3.5 centimeters; a game changer for those who are at the end of their rope with erectile dysfunction. It also leverages your own regenerative cells, making it completely safe and totally natural.

Hollywood women applaud Weinstein's impending arrest

Actresses Rose McGowan and Asia Argento were among the first women who celebrated the news of the movie mogul's decision to turn himself in to police.

Women in Hollywood applauded on Thursday after Harvey Weinstein agreed to turn himself in to authorities in New York after a monthslong investigation into multiple allegations of sexual misconduct.

More than 70 women have accused the once-powerful film producer of sexual impropriety, including rape, since October 2017. Weinstein has denied having nonconsensual sex with anyone.

Weinstein was expected to surrender on Friday morning, a person familiar with the case said. The exact nature of the charges being brought against him by Manhattan prosecutors was unclear.

"BOOM," tweeted Italian actress Asia Argento, who has accused Weinstein of raping her at the Cannes film festival in 1997 when she was 21.

Argento repeated her accusations in an emotional speech at the Cannes festival on Saturday.

Weinstein's Italian attorney said on Saturday that Argento's allegations were "completely false." On Thursday in the United States, Weinstein's spokesman Juda Engelmayer and Weinstein's New York lawyer Benjamin Brafman both declined to comment.

Rose McGowan, who was among the first actresses to accuse Weinstein of sexual assault, said his victims were "one step closer to justice."

"I, and so many of Harvey Weinstein's survivors, had given up hope that our rapist would be held accountable by law," McGowan said in a statement. "May this give hope to all victims and survivors everywhere that are telling their truths."

Former "Sopranos" actress Annabella Sciorra, who has said she was sexually assaulted by Weinstein in the 1990s, tweeted "Can't Wait!" followed by "Anyone know where I can get

"A Wrinkle in Time" director Ava DuVernay, one of the leaders of the Time's Up campaign against sexual harassment in the workplace, posted a link on Twitter to news of Weinstein's expected surrender, adding "Karma NEVER loses an address."

Tarana Burke, the founder of the wider #MeToo movement triggered by accusations against Weinstein, told Hollywood trade publication Variety that the expected charges represent a shift in the movement to change how sexual violence is handled. "This moves from the court of public opinion into an actual courtroom," Burke told Variety in an interview. "That is super cathartic for a bunch of the survivors, or even survivors who are not necessarily victimized by him."

Melissa Silverstein, founder of the blog Women and Hollywood, wrote on Twitter, "This is for all the women who stood up and spoke out and for those who endured years of pain who probably never thought this day would come."

Yellow taxis are getting some modern updates, like allowing passengers to see a flat fare if they e-hail a cab. PIXABAY

NYC yellow taxis getting update through Curb tech

See the fare when you hail a cab, and request, reserve and pay for rides with your phone.

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT
kristin.toussaint@metro.us

New York's yellow taxis are getting an update.

You'll soon be able to see a flat, upfront fare when you hail a cab with the taxi app Curb as part of a series of upgrades the company is rolling out to make cabs more modern.

Curb Mobility, the tech company behind the app that lets you request, reserve and pay for cabs with your smartphone, announced Thursday two new Android tablets called Dash and Ryde will be implemented into its yellow taxis across the city starting next month.

Dash replaces taxi meters with a tablet that has tools like multi-language support, GPS navigation

“Yellow cabs are part of the fabric that makes this city so vibrant and distinctive. In the face of disruption, there is a unique opportunity to modernize and enhance the taxi experience for both sides.”

Amos Tamam, CEO of Curb, in a statement and live traffic information. It also incorporates a heatmap, allowing drivers to see where the highest demand for a trip is — street hails or e-hails — based on historical trip data analyzed by Curb.

The technology will also allow yellow taxi drivers to offer riders a flat-upfront fare if passengers book through e-hail apps like Curb, though that feature won't be released until later this summer.

Street hails must still be meter-based, according to the pilot program approved by the NYC Taxi & Limousine Commission, but through that feature, booking a cab with your phone will get you a quote for your route like Uber and Lyft.

Ryde is the passenger-facing upgrade: a 10-inch tablet that runs on Android, rather than Windows, and pairs with the Dash system. This will display the usuals like video entertainment, a live map of the cab's current location and trip info, but will soon also support third-party apps — maybe Spotify or OpenTable, so you can play music or find a restaurant while you ride.

Dockless bike-share companies like Spin let you pick up and drop off bicycles without relying on docking stations. SPIN

Dockless bike-share pilot coming to outer boroughs this summer: Mayor

The test program will bring bicycles to Coney Island, the Rockaways, the central Bronx and the North Shore of Staten Island.

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT
kristin.toussaint@metro.us

Dockless bike-share options are coming to the outer boroughs, Mayor Bill de Blasio announced on Thursday.

A dockless bike-share lets you pick up and drop off a bicycle at bike racks, on the sidewalk or any designated area without needing to find a specific docking station.

These bikes can be found and unlocked through the ride-shares' apps, and now, they're rolling into the four outer boroughs to give New Yorkers more two-wheeled transit options.

Beginning in July, the dockless bike-share pilots will be implemented in Coney Island, Brooklyn and the Rockaways in Queens — two beach communities, the mayor's office said, that have yet to be reached by any bike-share.

Later in the summer, dockless bike pilots will come to the Bronx, near Fordham University, and Staten Island's North Shore, as well.

"We are bringing new, inexpensive transportation options to neighborhoods that need them," de Blasio said in a statement. "Dockless public bike-sharing starts this summer, and we're excited to see how New Yorkers embrace this new service."

Because docking stations don't need to be installed, the timeline to implement them is a bit different. In June, the Department of Transportation will go to the test areas' community boards to present plans and finalize boundaries. This is also when DOT will select which dockless bike-share companies to be assigned to each area.

In July, the pilot will kick off as bicycles arrive "on a rolling basis" to neighborhood streets. The goal, the city said, is to have a total of 200 bikes that offer half-hour rides and which remain in each borough's set boundaries. Some of these will be pedal-assist bicycles.

After September, the DOT will work with community stakeholders to either extend or end these pilots, depending on how they do, and determine if additional pilot programs should be set up in different areas.

"With no better time than summer to hop on a bike, we at DOT are excited to bring bike-share to more of New York City," said DOT Commissioner Polly Trottenberg in a statement. "We will take what we learn over the next few months to make informed, clear-eyed decisions as to whether New York City's bike-share future is dockless. In the meantime, we strongly encourage New Yorkers to get out this summer and explore some great neighborhoods by bike — and of course, give us their feedback on the dockless experience."

"Dockless public bike-sharing starts this summer, and we're excited to see how New Yorkers embrace this new service."

We recently received a Grumble from one of our readers about the many annoying things our co-workers are capable of. The points this reader made resonated with me deeply. So, I felt as though I needed to weigh in. As anyone who knows me can tell you, I'm a pretty easygoing guy. I'd like to this quality follows me into the office environment. But when coworkers leave out food in common areas or take up space in the fridge for days — or even weeks or months — it just bugs me to no end. In some cases, people will leave out food as a nice treat for the rest of the office. But when it's left out after the initial reveal, someone needs to take some ownership of the mess and toss it in the trash. It's even worse when people take up real estate in the fridge with ancient leftovers. Sure, keeping Cheryl's birthday cake after her party was a nice idea so people can pick at it for a few days. But if her party was six months ago and that thing is as stiff as a tombstone, pitch it.

Vaping!

The problem with vaping is that it's relatively new. It was first sold in 2004 and came to the USA in 2007 so there are not enough research that show the long term health effects. It took 30 years for people to finally realize that cigarettes were hazardous to people's health. It is known that vaping contains cancer-causing chemicals like formaldehyde, propylene glycol (which are used in anti-freeze), diacetyl (when inhaled it can cause lung disease), and it still contains the chemical nicotine. 30 years later from now who knows if there will be research that says vaping is dangerous. Yes, vaping might be safer for people who want to substitute it for cigarettes, however, how about those who don't smoke or vape. Why do the non-smokers have to suffer and inhale your bad habits.

Take another ride in the Millennium Falcon with
"Solo: A Star Wars Story." ALL PHOTOS: LUCASFILM

How 'Solo' pays homage to the original 'Star Wars' trilogy

Seeds planted four decades ago pay off in the new flick.

REED TUCKER
letters@metro.us

"Solo: A Star Wars Story" is a prequel, as you might have heard. The tale centers on a young Han Solo (Alden Ehrenreich) years before audiences meet him in 1977's "Star Wars." And like most prequels, it aims to flesh out a character's backstory at which has previously only been hinted. It's a tried-and-true Hollywood strategy that has been deployed with everyone from deranged killer Hannibal Lecter to, er, deranged killer Norman Bates.

Precious little about Han Solo's history is revealed in the original "Star Wars" and its sequels, "The Empire Strikes Back" and "Return of the Jedi." More details were given in spinoff novels and comic books, but Lucasfilm declared those non-canon in 2014.

As a result, father-and-son "Solo" screenwriters Lawrence and Jonathan Kasdan had to make do with what they had. Here are four lines from the original trilogy that were mined for "Solo" and look to finally be explained some four decades later.

"You've never heard of the Millennium Falcon? It's the ship that made the Kessel run in less than twelve parsecs." - Han in "Star Wars"

Never mind that this line was such a throw-away that "Star Wars" mastermind George Lucas mistakenly used parsec, a measure of distance instead of time. "Solo" explains just what the hell that Kessel run is and why Solo was bragging about it.

"Your ship? Hey, remember, you lost her to me fair and square." - Han to Lando in "The Empire Strikes Back"

It came as a shock that Lando was the Falcon's original owner. Now "Solo" shows exactly how the craft changed hands over a not-so-friendly game of Sabacc - a made-up card game that "Star Wars" owner Disney failed to register and is now being sued by an unrelated gaming company that snatched up the trademark.

"You know, that ship saved my life quite a few times." - Lando in "The Empire Strikes Back"

Now we get to see some of those times, as a young Calrissian (Donald Glover) evades the evil Empire, pirates and Lovecraftian space squids.

"Han Solo. I'm captain of the Millennium Falcon." - Han in "Star Wars"

Simple line. But as Disney CEO Bob Iger promised last year, "Solo" does indeed explain how the title character "got his name." Now if someone could explain where "Mon Mothma" comes from.

Lando Calrissian's pansexuality

Lando is pansexual, Jonathan Kasdan recently told the Huffington Post. "And I love the fluidity — sort of the spectrum of sexuality that Donald appeals to and that droids are part of." In the movie, Lando has a curvaceous robot companion L3-37 (Phoebe Waller-Bridge), but it's unclear exactly how close they are. There are hints, though, to Lando's wide variety of interests. You be the judge. "Everything you heard about me is true." - Lando "I thought she loved me." - Lando on L3-37 I'm an expert with intertwined celestial bodies." - Lando "You're adorable." - Lando to Han "You done flirting?" - L3-37 to Lando about Han

Chewbacca actor says he can beat LeBron James one-on-one

Find out how Han met Chewie in "Solo: A Star Wars Story." LUCASFILM

Actor and former basketball player Joonas Suotamo opens up about "Solo: A Star Wars Story."

matthew.juul@metro.us

A long time ago, in a galaxy that's not so far away, Joonas Suotamo hoped to make it big as a basketball player.

While the 6'10" Pennsylvania State University alum only got to play as a pro in his native Finland, the baller-turned-actor found a new use for his height: taking over for the legendary Peter Mayhew as Chewbacca. Suotamo first got his Wookiee on as a body double for Mayhew in "Star Wars: The Force Awakens" before receiving the gig full-time for "The Last Jedi."

The Finnish star is back as Chewbacca in "Solo: A Star Wars Story," which opens in theaters this weekend. Suotamo isn't the only one who's subbing in for a "Star Wars" icon, as Alden Ehrenreich is now playing a younger Han Solo in place of Harrison Ford.

We caught up with Suotamo about his experience filming "Solo," if he thinks he can ball with LeBron James and if he'll be back as the Wookiee for "Episode IX."

How does the start of Han and Chewbacca's relationship in "Solo" compare to the end of their friendship in "Force Awakens"?

It's very interesting, the beginning of any relationship, but especially Han and Chewie's. All I can say is that it's not an easy one. It took me completely by surprise how they do end up meeting for the first time. It's very interesting to see on screen. They did a fantastic job at introducing all these characters and making it really feel like a spontaneous adventure story, where you don't know what's going to happen even though, in the back of your mind, you can kind of get the idea. Things can go either way in this film, and that's what I love about the feel of this movie.

Alden just did such a fantastic job. From day one, he was really prepared. He had studied a lot of "Star Wars" and knew a lot of terminology for the character and what it meant. He had been a fan as well as his life. I was really happy to be working with him because, unlike Harrison, I could feel a friendly connection there in the sense that we're both young guys who grew up with "Star Wars" and get to play these characters. He just really made it his own. I love that he's now getting the recognition that he most surely deserves.

Considering you were big into basketball before joining the world of "Star Wars," what's your prediction for the Celtics-Cavaliers series? I'm really torn. I would love to see what the king can do, but I think the Celtics are really tough this year. I went to see them one time play the Raptors. They're a really solid team with a great coach. The Cavs are the underdogs, so I guess I want to see the Cavs come back in the series.

Do you think Chewbacca—or rather you as Chewbacca—could take LeBron James in my vertical. Surely there would be no one to stop Chewbacca in a basketball game.

Going back to "Star Wars," will you return for "Episode IX"?

All I will say is that J.J. [Abrams] is directing "Episode IX" and I would love to be involved. That's all I'm going to say.

What about a Chewbacca solo movie? Who would you want to team up with if that ever happened?

That would be exciting, wouldn't it? I think it would be very cool to team up with a group of stranded Jedi. That would be a very cool thing to happen.

"Solo: A Star Wars Story" flies into theaters May 25.

MEET THE CREATURES OF 'SOLO'

We've come a long way from the days of 1977's occasionally lo-fi "Star Wars," in which one of the cantina scene aliens got his glowing eyes from a (visible) flashlight jammed in the back of his head.

The crew behind "Solo: A Star Wars Story" had better tech — as well as a healthier budget — to work with when it came to creating its dizzying array of exotic creatures. In total, some 500 designs for new aliens crossed the drawing board.

Here are three who made the cut and can now look forward to living forever on toy store shelves.

The party starts when Lando walks in "Solo" writers Jon and Lawrence Kasdan on how the galaxy's sexiest gambler very nearly steals the film.

EVA KIS
eva.kis@metro.us

As soon as Donald Glover walked in, there was no doubt who would play the young smooth-talking gambler Lando Calrissian in the Star Wars Anthology film "Solo."

"When he came in to audition, we said, 'There's no question the auditions are over,'" recalls Lawrence Kasdan, who co-wrote "Solo" with his son Jon, in an exclusive interview with Metro. "If you met him today, you would feel the same thing — he's an extraordinary character, a major artist, he loves this character among the many things he loves and [as a writer] you say, 'Oh my God, this is an incredible resource for seeing young Lando.'"

It's fair to say the Kasdans' origin story about the life (and love) of Han Solo before a Jedi master, a farmboy, a princess and two droids derail his smuggling career has been somewhat hijacked by Glover's performance.

His even smoother and sexier take on Lando has claimed much of the internet buzz since the first trailer for the movie premiered. Then, Jon Kasdan shook a giant leap for sexual freedom in the galaxy when he revealed Lando to be pansexual — as in women, men, droids, aliens, etc. "There's a fluidity to Donald and Billy Dee's [portrayal of Lando's] sexuality," he told the Huffington Post last week. "I love the fluidity — sort of the spectrum of sexuality that Donald appeals to and that droids are a part of."

Or, as intergalactic pragmatist Glover put it to Entertainment Weekly: "How can you not be pansexual in space? Yeah, he's coming on to everybody. I mean, yeah, whatever. It just didn't seem that weird to me 'cause I feel like if you're in space it's kind of like, the door is open!"

(Lando may be the first to be embraced as openly pansexual, but Vice Admiral Holdo's dialogue with General Leia Organa in "The Last Jedi" novelization hinted at her own preference for all the goods the galaxy may proffer.)

Out of all the threads in Han's life the Kasdans could've picked up, meeting Lando was the one Jon hoped they could tell even before Glover became involved. "I was particularly personally excited to visit Lando as a younger man. I loved that character as a kid and growing up," he tells Metro.

"But as excited as I was, I don't think either of us had the foggiest notion that Donald would come in and make it something beyond our wildest dreams and something that would catch the zeitgeist so perfectly. You just hope that magic happens occasionally, and then it does and you can only just watch it."

Fellow Lando fans, you've been heard — but you might have to wait a while. A solo outing for the galaxy's sexiest gambler is on Lucasfilm's radar, according to studio president Kathleen Kennedy, but there are no immediate plans to send him off on his own adventure in the Millennium Falcon.

Michelle Wolf's big 'Break'

The "Daily Show" alum's new late-night show premieres on Netflix this weekend.

ANDREW HUSBAND
letters@metro.us

After two seasons, Netflix canceled Chelsea Handler's "Chelsea" in October, ending the streaming service's first foray into original talk-show programming.

The vacuum didn't last long, however, as David Letterman's monthly "My Next Guest" and Joel McHale's weekly "The Joel McHale Show" premiered in January and February 2018. If that weren't enough, Netflix also announced it was giving former "The Daily Show" correspondents Hasan Minhaj and Michelle Wolf their own late night-esque programs.

Minhaj's won't air until sometime later this year, but "The Break With Michelle Wolf" drops its first weekly episode Sunday, May 27. Billed as a half-hour variety and sketch series, Wolf introduced "The Break" in a short trailer previewing what the first episode might look like.

"There's a lot going on in the world right now," she says. "The point is, we're all going to die." And much like her old gigs at "The Daily Show" and "Late Night With Seth Meyers," Wolf's "The Break" looks like your typical late-night comedy show.

Except for the fact that Wolf is a woman, unlike Letterman, McHale and Minhaj. Along with Samantha Bee on TBS, Robin Thede on BET and Sarah Silverman on Hulu, the inclusion of her series now means that four women will be hosting late night talk shows in the U.S. Busy Philipps recently announced she will host a show on E! in the future.

This is great news, and the comedian's late-night experience proves she can handle her own show. Yet this isn't the only reason Wolf's star has been steadily on the rise for the past few years.

Most recently, she caught the country's attention thanks to her performance at the 2018 White House Correspondents' Dinner last month. Not only did Wolf refuse to shy away from roasting the absent President Donald Trump, but she also joked about Sarah Huckabee Sanders while the press secretary sat just a few seats to her left.

Many criticized Wolf for her quips about Sanders, but the comic stood her ground on social media and in subsequent interviews. "I wouldn't change a single word," she told NPR. "I'm very happy with what I said, and I'm glad I stuck to my guns."

The episode may have been a resounding wakeup call for broadcast, cable and streaming audiences largely unfamiliar with Wolf's work, and that's a good thing. Before her WHCD performance, her biggest claim to fame was the critically acclaimed comedy special "Michelle Wolf: Nice Lady," which premiered on HBO in 2017. Now that "The Break" is almost here and practically everyone knows who she is, however, that's all about to change.

joseph.pantorno@metro.us

Liverpool meets Real Madrid for the European championship on Saturday afternoon.

Two of the best soccer players in the world provide a tantalizing appetizer before the 2018 World Cup in Russia with the Champions League Final this Saturday in Kiev, Ukraine.

The European championship between Spanish giants Real Madrid and traditional English power Liverpool will feature Portuguese superstar Cristiano Ronaldo, one of the most well-known soccer players in the world, and new kid on the block Mohamed Salah.

Ronaldo has once again proven why he, alongside Barcelona's Lionel Messi, is one of the greatest soccer stars in the world, recording 44 goals in 43 appearances in all competitions with Real Madrid.

This could very well be his last game with Real Madrid as rumors have suddenly begun to swirl about a possible reunion with manager Jose Mourinho at Manchester United, a club he spent six years with.

Salah though, at just 25 years old, has burst onto the international scene this season, his first with Liverpool after struggling to attain any real sort of success with Chelsea and Roma. The Egyptian who single-handedly willed his country to a first World Cup appearance in 28 years scored 45 goals in 52 appearances in all competitions.

He'll attempt to win Liverpool its first European crown since a historic comeback win in 2005 against AC Milan while Real Madrid has won the past two Champions League titles.

Los Blancos are the most successful team in the history of the European championships with 12 titles, five more than the next-best club, Milan.

Liverpool has five to its name, the most of any English team. However, they have won the competition only once in the past 34 years. This is the Reds' first trip to the final since 2007, which they lost to Milan.

Isles could go after Kovalchuk

The veteran forward has spent the past five years playing professionally in Russia.

JOE PANTORNO
joseph.pantorno@metro.us

The NHL world awaits the return of Russian goal scorer Ilya Kovalchuk, who has spent the past five years playing professionally in his home country after a shocking retirement in the midst of a 15-year contract with the New Jersey Devils.

But after turning 35 in mid-April, Kovalchuk officially was off the NHL's voluntary retirement list, meaning that he could come back to the North American league as an unrestricted free agent.

Drafted first overall by the Atlanta Thrashers

(later becoming the Winnipeg Jets) in 2001, Kovalchuk quickly became one of the premier scorers in the NHL, recording 40-plus goals three times and 50 or more goals on two occasions.

After being traded by the Thrashers during the final year of his contract with the belief that he would not be re-signed, Kovalchuk joined the Devils midway through the 2009-10 season, recording 27 points in 27 games. It earned him that massive contract from former Devils president and general manager Lou Lamoriello, though he would only play in three seasons before his surprising retirement in 2013.

It has plenty of teams kicking the tires on Kovalchuk's status where he will be able to negotiate with teams when the NHL's free agency period opens up on July 1.

One of those teams

Ilya Kovalchuk has a history with new Islanders president Lou Lamoriello. GETTY IMAGES that could very well be in the discussion recently hired Kovalchuk's former GM Lou Lamoriello: the New York Islanders.

While on Sportsnet 650, hockey insider

Elliotte Friedman disclosed that the Lamoriello and the Islanders could very well be in the running for the Russian winger.

"I do think — one of the things I'm kind of hearing — is that I do think that Kovalchuk could be a part of this," Friedman said (h/t Chris Nichols, FRSHockey.com). "Lou Lamoriello has a big history with Ilya Kovalchuk. I wouldn't be surprised if he'll make a pitch to him to come to the Islanders."

Lamoriello has a lengthy to-do list with the Islanders this off-season, the top priority being to re-sign captain and star center John Tavares. However, surrounding the 27-year-old with the best talent available could help the process of securing him for the foreseeable future.

Kovalchuk's better days are behind him, but there's no denying that this is a playmaker who would add scoring depth to the Islanders' attack. That could mean flanking him on the left of Tavares (should he re-sign) on the first line, or ensuring Anders Lee stays a first-liner and putting him on the second unit alongside Calder Trophy finalist Mathew Barzal.
